Dear Friends,

In 2013, John Kindschuh suffered a life-altering stroke, and we had the rare opportunity to journey with him and his family through recovery. It took years for John to relearn the countless day-to-day activities he currently enjoys. John's story is compelling. His deep faith and grit, along with hundreds of community supporters – including you – still celebrate the healing journey with John and his family today.

John wrote about this experience, but after attempts to get his book published, he welcomed my suggestion about adding to the focus of his story. I think John's story is OUR story! We would love to hear your experience in helping John and his family. What you did, no matter how small, contributed to the story of John, Cindy, and their children. Whether you helped scrub floors or scrubbed for surgery, administered medication or made critical medical decisions, gave counsel or Holy Communion, gave physical or horse therapy, or supported his reentry into his law career, your story counts. We want to hear about it.

My first publishing project in 2002 was a local history book about the Dove that towers over West County Mall. It launched a publishing journey that continues today as Imagine That Enterprises, LC. That book was successful because of the many stories contributed by people who had memories about the landmark sign over Highway 270. Meet Me Under the Dove: A Collection of Memories is THEIR book. John and I envision that book format for his story, but we need you to make it a success.

God is in the ordinary moments. How many times have you shared John's story with others? Now we can impact people even further with a rich and meaningful collection of memories that is due to be completed in Spring 2026.

Your story matters. We will sort through contributions, seek interviews, edit, and compile a book that will become an important account of the power of community. Read about the details for submitting your story.

Guidelines for contributing to John Kindschuh's book of memories

Submissions are welcome until December 19, 2025

You will be notified if your submission is selected to be included in the book by January 15, 2026

Briefly write your experience, keeping in mind that the average attention span for adults is only 8 seconds. Your story will be edited, and you may be contacted for more information to add impact to your story. Here are some points to consider in your content:

- Why did you decide to help John and his family?
- What impact did your service have on you? Were you changed, and if so, in what way?
- What impact did John and his family's experience have on the community?
- What excited, surprised, saddened, brought joy, hope, or deepened your faith?
- Did you see this experience impact the faith of others?
- What did this inspire around you? Did someone believe in the power of God in a new way? How?
- Do you have a suggestion about the title of the book? Let us know!

Remember, God is in the ordinary. For example, maybe washing dishes brought a new insight that changed the trajectory of your life...
